ACID Magic Receives NSF Standard 60 Certification as a Drinking Water Treatment Agent

COMMERCE CITY, CO (April 4, 2013) Certol International, LLC announced that ACID Magic® has been granted the coveted NSF/ANSI Standard 60 Certification from the National Sanitation Foundation (NSF).

NSF/ANSI Standard 60 certification allows ACID Magic to be used as a drinking water treatment chemical for pH adjustment, corrosion and scale control and as a cleaning agent for water treatment lines. Many states and Canadian provinces require certification to NSF Standards for water treatment chemicals and products in contact with drinking water. Qualifying for certification by the NSF requires that both the product and the manufacturing facility meet rigorous standards and pass a battery of tests to ensure that the product does not contribute contaminants to drinking water that will cause adverse health effects.

This certification opens the door to new markets for ACID Magic, including municipal and industrial drinking water treatment, water well service and repair and numerous other industries requiring NSF Standard 60 certification for the chemicals they utilize in their processes. ACID Magic has many uses and is available in multiple sizes to meet a wide variety of needs. For more information on ACID Magic, visit www.Certol.com/ACIDMagic.
